EUROPEAN AFFAIRS.

We know how easy a thing it is to speculate upon European affairs, and the condition of the different nationalities of the Old World. The American writer, or jour inlist, has only to take his stand-point, and then, with a sort of abandon, he can draw his picture with outlines and colorings to suit his most exuberant fancy, with the certainty that but few critics can gainsay the life-like accuracy and truthfulness of his portraiture. It is easy enough to conjecture what this or that crowned head will do in a certain emergency, and to point out the chicanery and finesseing which the statesmen and diplomats of these Governments will resort to, provided this or that shall occur. Particular events may occur, and then inevitable results will follow. Thus many of our writers and journalists reason, and when therefore there appears to be the least chaffing or disagreement between two Powers, they precipitate a war, and we are called to notice the march of armies long before any well-advised man in Europe has seen

For many months past we have been as-sured almost daily that a war was about to commence between France and Prussia Nothing could prevent this immediate out It was inevitable and certain, and we were so instructed in respect to the im-minency of this conflict that we caught at our morning papers in the firm conviction that the cable dispatches would announce, in flaming capitals, war between France and Prussia commenced. But when this did not come off, according to the advertised programme of the showman, certain reasons have been given which have chiefly amounted to this postponement on account of the failure of some prominent actor to present! It is not a very difficult matter to find a reason for not meeting an engagement when the certainty of our doing so depends largely upon the conduct and course other parties may choose to pursue. If France and Prussia will fight American journalists cannot make them do so, and no possible romancing of the cable agents can bring about this con-

We submit that on several occasions. we had looked no deeper than the troubled surface of affairs, we should have said was is inevitable. The struggles of two great Powers for the supremacy, for the leading and most potential position in Continents Europe, does not, in itself, insure war The struggle for this mastery through negotiations and diplomacy, is one thing; the onflict of arms to secure it and the lia. offities to fail of its attainment, is quite another thing. Here is just where the struggle is at this moment between France and Prussia. It is which shall be the leading Power in Europe. Now, will they fight for it? We do not think it, at least, for the present. Though the "nephew of " might be willing to risk much to achieve this high vantage ground, still he must have a reasonable chance of winning specess, before he ventures to cast his all upon the hazard of this die. willing, of course, to admit that the peace conference at London did not—though it pot and for a like number of minutes. Some of appeared to-settle the Luxemburg question, nor make these two Powers any better friends. The old quarrel still ramkles. not fight, for obvious reasons. What is true of individuals is true of nations.

There are several important considers tions which it is necessary to take into the account in the consideration of this state of things existing between France and Prussia, and the writer who ignores these considerations will be very likely to stumble to his conclusions. Ideas and theories are very pretty things, and speculations may amuse; but facts are stubborn things. And in Europe, and also in this country, we are fast coming to distrust the speculative and ideal, as applied to policies, and are coming down to what is, and what is not, the netual and the practical in the domain of politics and government.

The writers in this country who assume that war between these two Powers is imminent reason from certain well-known conditions of European complications. It is asserted that the treaty of Prague means that Prussia shall surrender to Denmark a portion of the territory of North Schlesit is his duty, to insist upon the fulfilment of this agreement. Upon this indefensible right, it is said, Narotson predicates his and perhaps some little aid from some of the German States. Now, all this looks very probable, and Narotzon, therefore seeing his advantage, will seize time by the forelock and conquer a peace, and compel Prussia to take a back seat in the family of European nations. There is one view of the state of things in Austria that greatly mars this nice little plot, provided NAPOLEON and FRANCIS JOSEPH should conclude to carry it through. Austria is not safe at home. When she enters upon a foreign war domestic difficulties may rise in her own borders which will ten to her speedy dissolution. Hungary, with all her seeming peace, has not abandoned all idea of independence. Besides, a large portion of the provinces of Austria belong what is known as the Schwonic family of nations, and all these have more sym pathy with Russia than with the House of the Hapsburg.

Again, the exchequer of FRANCIS JOSEP is not very plethoric at this time. A com bination between France and Austria to bring on a war with Prussia may bring or a domestic war in the Austrian dominions nd thus give the Emperor of Austria al he can do at home, if it does not send his ouse tumbling to its final and complete ruin. It is fair to presume that FRANCIS JOSEPH, and NAPOLEON, too, understan this matter, and they will not move without having an eye to these probabilities. There are so many difficulties that environ the crowned heads of Europe to-day that before any of them "cry havoc, and let slip the dogs of war," they will cast about them and endeavor to ascertain whether the game is a losing or a paying one.

The New York Constitutional Convention.

New York, August 2.—In the Constitutional Convention yesterday, after some unimportant business, a motion to adjourn sine die on the 9th of September was laid on the table.

For the West endang August 2, 1867.

Flour....The remarks last week relative to the flour market are applicable to to-day, the market continuing quiet, and the stock on hand very much reduced, in consequence of the scarcity of grain. Sales have been confined almost axclusively to local wants, the only exception being the shipment of a few hundred barrels to an Eastern market in the early part of the week. Our quotations to-day are nominal, and as follows: Welch's family, $17, Georgetown cutrs, $12.50a1.50; Georgetown super $10.00; canal family, $14.50a15; canal extra, $13; canal super, $10 per barrel.

Whest.—The offerings for the week have not kept pace with the demand, and the market has ruled firm, with a slight upward tendency. Today the receipts reached 3, 930 bushels red wheat, and the demand was brisk, sales of 625 bushels red choice being made at $2.62; 1, 235 bushels good do. at $2.51, and 1,400 bushels prime at $2.60; per bushel, the market closing firm at the first and last figures.

Corn.—We have no special feature to note in the condition of the market for corn since our last weekly review. The receipts have been light, and with a good steady demand prices have been wall maintained. This morning there was offered 1,000 bushels, but the only sale reported was 625 bushels white at $1.12 per bushel. Colors.—We have not been apprised of any savement in Oats since our last report, but the mistiget has considerably given way, and at the close small sales of new were making at 60 cts. weight.
